Guide to Insurance for Small Business is Released by Division of Insurance

Thinking of starting your own business, and wondering what type of insurance you should have? Or has your business grown, and you want to know if your insurance coverage still matches the needs of your business?

The Colorado Division of Insurance has developed the “Guide to Insurance for Small Business” to provide an overview to many types of insurance so business consumers can make educated choices for insurance.

“Growth in small businesses is a critical element to Colorado’s economic health,” said John J. Postolowski, Interim Commissioner of Insurance. “The guide to insurance is one of many resources Colorado is providing to enable new and small businesses to succeed.”

While businesses count on insurance to protect the investment in time, money and other resources, consumers are also protected when businesses are insured. Should anything go wrong with goods and services, certain insurance may compensate people who interact with a business when there is a problem or concern.

The Guide to Insurance for Small Business can be found on the Division of Insurance website at: <http://www.dora.state.co.us/insurance/consumer/businessguide.htm>
